Accessing non-concessional contributions information on myGov

11 April 2024

Non-concessional contributions (NCCs) include personal contributions made to super from after-tax income or other available savings. Limits apply to the total NCCs that you can contribute to super without exceeding your contribution limit. To help avoid breaching the cap, you can access your contribution information on myGov.

What are non-concessional contributions?

Non-concessional contributions (NCCs) include those made with after-tax money, such as your take home pay, or funds in your bank account. NCCs may provide significant opportunities to build super for retirement. NCCs form part of the tax-free component of your super interest and are not taxed when released from super.

NCCs commonly include:

- personal contributions for which a tax deduction is not claimed
- spouse contributions
- excess concessional contributions not released from super, and
- certain amounts transferred from a foreign super fund.

Am I eligible to make NCCs?

To be able to make NCCs, you need to meet certain eligibility rules. This includes:

- you're aged under 75 at the time you make the contribution¹, and
- your 'total super balance'² at the previous 30 June is less than certain limits (see below).

¹ Contributions must be received by your fund no later than 28 days after the month you turn 75.

² Total super balance includes the total of all amounts you hold in super accumulation and pension accounts, in-transit rollovers, and if you have a self-managed super fund, it may also include the outstanding balance of a limited recourse borrowing arrangement. The total is reduced by personal injury or structured settlement contributions made to super.

Limits on NCCs

Like other contribution types, there are limits on the total amount of NCCs you can contribute to super and penalties apply if limits are breached. For more information on excess contributions, see ato.gov.au.

In 2023/24 the annual NCC cap is $110,000 (and increasing to $120,000 in 2024/25). However, depending on your total super balance, you may be able to use the bring forward rule to make even larger contributions sooner. This rule may enable you to bring forward up to two years' worth of NCCs in addition to the current year's cap.

What's my limit?

Your eligibility to contribute up to the annual NCC cap or larger amounts under the bring forward rule, is determined based on your total super balance. The limits for the current and next financial years are summarised in the table on the following page. You can check your total super balance details using myGov.

How to access non-concessional contribution details on myGov

There are a few ways you can monitor your NCCs and to check whether you're currently in a bring forward period.

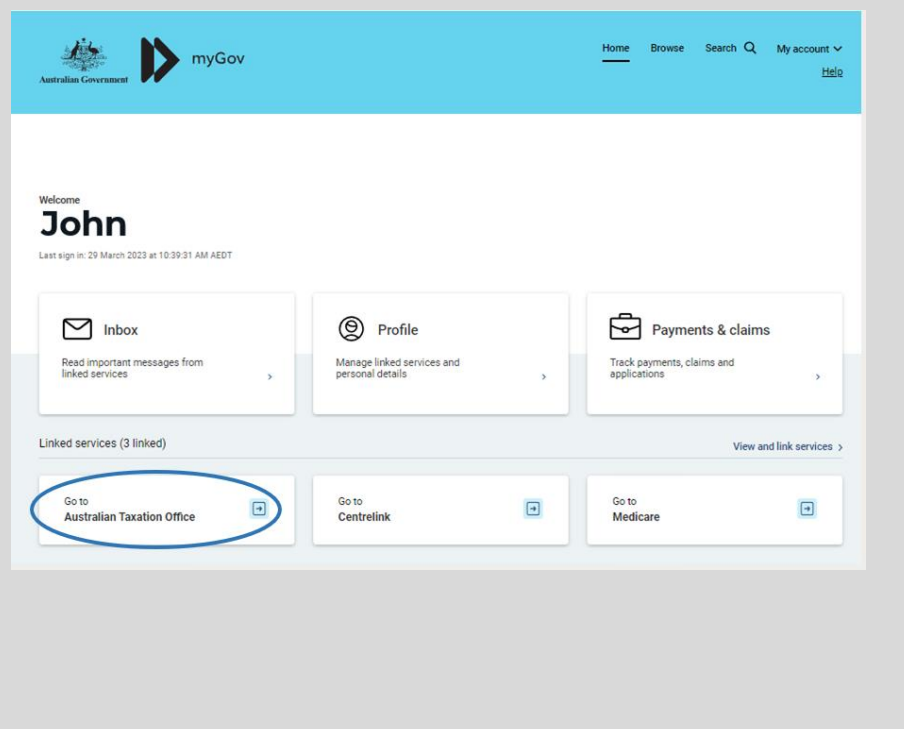

On the following pages, the steps to using myGov to access NCC information are explained. However, it is recommended that detailed records also be maintained and referred to. This is because there may be a delay before your super fund reports details about your contributions to the ATO. Remember, additional tax applies for excess contributions.

In this example, the person has $89,000 of their NCC cap remaining

Non-concessional contributions

Non-concessional contributions are made from after tax income and are not taxed in the super fund. Super funds report the contributions to us and we determine whether they are non-concessional contributions. The decisions made with this information can have tax consequences. We recommend independent financial advice specific to individual circumstances is obtained.

Note: The information shown reflects the information that the ATO has received from your super funds to that point. If there is a delay in any of your funds reporting to the ATO, or there has been an error in reporting, the information displayed will not be accurate. Funds do not report your 30 June total super balance often until some months into the new financial year. It is important to maintain your own records and ascertain contribution information from other sources, such as your super fund or financial adviser, to determine contribution eligibility.

- For information on bring forward arrangements, click the 'Super' tab, and then 'Information' to reveal a second menu. Select 'Bring forward arrangement'

The screenshot shows the Australian Government Australian Taxation Office myGov interface. At the top, there is a navigation bar with tabs for 'Tax', 'Super', 'Employment', and 'My profile'. The 'Super' tab is selected. Below the navigation bar, there is a user profile for 'Cheryl Richards'. A dropdown menu is open under the 'Super' tab, showing options: 'Fund details', 'Information', and 'Manage'. The 'Information' option is selected, and a secondary dropdown menu is visible with options: 'Total superannuation balance', 'Concessional contributions', 'Carry-forward concessional contributions', 'Non-concessional contributions', 'Bring forward arrangement', 'Transfer balance cap', 'Employer contributions', and 'YourSuper comparison'. The 'Bring forward arrangement' option is highlighted. In the background, a table shows 'Total superannuation balance' as $563,909.40, 'Due date' as 31 Oct 2023, and a 'Prepare' button. A 'Payments are up to date' message is also visible.

Next steps

Contribution rules and eligibility criteria for NCCs and the bring forward provisions are complex. This guide is not designed to provide comprehensive information about how the rules work or how they may apply to you. It is important that you speak with your financial adviser, your registered tax agent and visit ato.gov.au for more information.
